

What is the Community Advisory Committee (CAC)?

Community Advisory Committees are vital components of effective Special Education programs in California.

The CAC is a group of parents, educators, and community members, which is established in accordance with Education Code 56190.

The Community Advisory Committee allows families an opportunity to:

- Share resources
- Encourage community and parental involvement in the development, review and implementation of the Local Plan
- Support activities on behalf of individuals with exceptional needs
- Assist in parent awareness of the importance of regular school attendance

If you are interested in learning more about the Community Advisory Committee, reach out to your local school district's Special Education Department.
